SPEECH OF GENERAL PALMER, AT LEX LOUISVILLE JOURNAL

condence of the Cincinnati G LEXINGTON, KY., August 1. Late vesterday afternoon it became generally nown that Major General John M. Palmer, mmancing this Department, was to arrive on

I am here, then, to night more particularly that I way see the people of this portion of the State that I may converse with them, that I may settle the question in my mind whether.

ducky, in the beginning of this controversy, could be perfectly neutral; that she could hold the halance up between these two great contending parties; and that Kentucky could keep the peace; and they determined that the sacred soil of Kentucky should not be invaded—and that was the opinion of many a good man. But there were a great many men, who, perhaps, were equally as good, although much worse reasoners, who thought that the Federal Government could not as a matter of right, could not as a matter of power, coerce the robels into submission. The same class of men manifested the same fealonsy of the Federal authorities that they do now. Year newspapers were filled then with these "gnawings that could not be nutered;" there apprehensions of Federal Interference. And I should like to know of the men who desire the perpetuity of this Union, if the Federal Government must be antagonized to any interest which is most likely to regard the interest of the people of Kentucky? The Federal Government, represented in Kentucky by soldiers from Indiana, Illin its, Ohlo, and by eeveral regiments of your own true some—is the Federal Government, which has done so much for Kentucky, more likely to invade the rights of her regainst the Government at all times? That is,

ments of your own true sons—is the Federal Government, which has done so much for Kentneky, more likely to invade the rights of her people than these men, whose voicts have heen against the Government at all times? That is, which would you rather trust as loyal men, a Federal regiment or a rebel mob? According to my poor way of thinking, I have still more confidence in the 'boys in bine jacketa,' [ap-planee] and if the literities of the people of Kenncky are to be subverted, my apprehensions do not lie in that direction. I do not believe that the liberties of the people of Kenncky are in any danger from either cause, because, in the first place, the Federal Government and the authorities of the Federal Government have no desire to interfere with your rights; and these other men will not be allowed to do it, if they do desire it. Applanes I sam exceedingly anxions that the people of Kenncky, after the election, which will take place next Monday, shall feel that they have had a fine election. I am exceedingly anxions that the people of Kenncky shall he brought in harmony with the Federal Government: that the people of Kenncky shall be disposered to the time of the machine of the first place in the first place in therefore, that it is my opinion the legal voters of the State of Kentucky—those who are legal voters by the laws of the State of Kentucky—shall settle all the questions that are unfolded in the election with is just at hand, and that they shall not be controlled by the soldiery, and they shall not be overridden by the enemy of the country. I say to those who have been in the rebel army, or those who have sympathized with these in rebellion, that this is the ight without hindrance, and those who are ex-luded from suffrage by the laws of the State days' grace. He said to them in September, 1852: "Unless you return to voor allegiance by the first day of January, 1863, I will I saue a preciamation emancipating all your slaves." And these men, when that proclamation came, said: "If he wants our negroes, come and take them." That proclamation was treated with perfect derision in the South. The proclamation of emancipation was issued, and from the hour it was issued the rebel power began to fall, and one of the most potent means for the overlhrow of the power of the rehellion was the demoralization of their system of labor, growing out of the proclamation of emancipation. Well, now, slavery is abolished in all the States but Missourl, Kentneky, and Delaware; perhaps West Virginia may also be excepted. Missourl has since abolished slavery by State action; Delaware has not abolished slavery by State action; Delaware has not abolished slavery by State action; when the slaver of the slavery we have the slavery of the slavery of the slavery when the control of difference whether she does or not. There is not from the three transparences agreat deal of dif-ference whether she does or not. There is not room in the whole State for more than the number of slaves that would be required to carry on a good-sized cotton plantaion, and she will not do much harm; and Kentneky and that little State are the ouly slave States in the that little State are the only slave States in the Uniou.

I want to tell you frankly that the people of the United States have got no other million of men to sacrifice over this slavery question. More than five hundred thousand brave men, fightling under the flag of our country, have died in this war brought upon the country for slavery. More than five hundred thousand brave fellows enlisted in a service in which they had no interest—more than five bundred thousand brave fellows of these Southern States, by precipice and appeals to their passions, have had no interest—more than fer bundred thonsand brave fellows of these Southern States, by prejudice and appeals to their passions, have clied fighting the hattics of slavery, and they are just as much a loss to our country as are any other five hundred thousand ol our sons. God forbid that I should not shed a tear over the graves of these brave men who have died in a cause in which their interests were in opposition to their efforts, because, if the rebellion had succeeded, it would have been the most unfortunate thing that could have happened for the brave men who have formed the rebel armies; "for it is true," as the rebel soldiers used to say, it was "a rich man's war and a poor man's fight." And it is true that the slaveholders, the large slave-holders, in the country went out and did the fighting. I have traveled over the constry: I do not know how it was here in Kentucky—there is enough to abuse Kentucky about the part she has taken in this war; I have nothing to say—but all over the Southern States where I have been I have found that the rich men were at home either as contractors with their Government or offlers in the army, and the poor men from the hills, the poor men if from the pine woods, the poor men if nom the valleys, the mechanics, and the laborars, formed the bulk of their army, fighting in a cause in which they had no interest. But that five bundred thousand men were as precious in the acuse of any other five hundred thousand men. A million of men have died in this soutered—and I wish to be understood as speaking with frankness—so far as I am corcerned, and so far as I shall have the power the cerned, and so far as I shall have the power there shall be no let up on this slavery question until the last shackle is struch from the wrists of the last slave. [Great applaase.] I have seen too many good men go down in this storm of battle, to consent that this lastitution shall be revived to deprive us of a million rance of our brave men. [Great applaase.] When the hour comes that the honor and glory of my country deems that I and my comrades shall go forth to fight list battles, I trust that I have courage enough the go, but I have not the heart. I hope that the hear shall never come again when Americans shall shed the blood of, Americans In any controversy, and God forbid that we shall disleving that somebody shall have the right of the labor of somebody clase without pay or reward. [Applaase.] During the Revolutionary war it did not cost us searcely a title of what this terrible struggle has cost the country.

Now, fellow-citizens, you ought to get this thing ont of your way. It is in your way now, and why? I have no argument to make here based upon the rights of these negroes, beyond this: I do hold it to be a truth as old as the carth litedif, as old as man himself—a truth that emanates, I believe, from the Atmighty himself, that every man is entitled to the fruits of his own labor. I do believe in the subtime nature of the Declaration of Independence, that "all men are (ndowed with certain inalienable rights; among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happlanes." I believe that precisely as I believe the truths of revelation lited, and so far as I am concerned, without claiming to be a saint, I would just as soon violate any principle of mornality as to violate that. I believe these negroes have that right—the right God has given them. They have affections, and those affections lead them into different relations, such as husband and wile, parcnit and child, and I believe they have a right to be led by their own labor. They have affections, and those affections lead them into different relations hall be no let up on this slavery question unti he last shackle is struck from the wrists of th

GRASS WIDOW CASES.

This class of divorces arises from the exigenles of the war. The husband being off, the one woman is either faschated, seduced, or voluntarily abandons herself to the embraces of a paramour. Husband comes home, finds an addition more to the family than the law allows, and snes for a divorce. Of this class of cases since January, 1862, some sixty-three have come up in court down to the present time. Then come the

The party interested leaves home on a collecting tour, to visit friends, a pleasure trip, originy reasonable excuse, smill-clent to account for an absence of two months. A visit is paid to an Indiana village, a petitiogrer obtained who draws the papers, which set forth the party to be an actual resident, and as this is "alwaye served by publication," a decree is easily obtained. Perhaps some months after the injured husband or wife finds the partner of their bosom living with another affairly. A enit for divorce is commenced and the defense is "a prior divorce." To the coedit of our courts, be it stated, that this system is being frowned down, and such divorces are generally divorced by the court.

By a rule of the Supreme Court, all divorce cases except by jury trial are kept secret; while in many cases this is proper, as not withdrawing the veil of domestic secrecy to the public gaze, yet in many instances it is one of the principal aids to fraud, and helps lawyers and collustive parties to burst those bonds which the welfare of the community demands once tled should not be weakened except in very rare cases. The Herald's New Orleans correspondent says the regulations of freedmen's affairs, and the adjustment of difficulties between planters and colored people, of course still engrossed a large part of the attention, on the part of the Government officials and the public generally, in Louisiana. The Assistant Superintendent of Freedmen at Shrevport gives a very favorable statement, representing that the majority of the negroes in that State are now working nucleic contracts with their former masters.

Some of the planters in the vicinity of Port Hudson have petitioned General Canby for the removal of the garrison at that place, on the plac that the negroes are neglecting work and tocking thicker. The General has referred the matter to the Freedmen's Burean, but it is not likely the garrison will be removed.

The General recently issued on order terminating the collecting of taxes in New Orleans for muricing a purposes by the military, the absence of the second of th

The Herald's correspondent at Matamora and Brownswille shows the falsity of the silly stories published in some of the papers of Washington and elsewhere, to the effect that Gen. The following are the particulars of the loss of the steamer Glasgow:

The British steamer Glasgow left New York at 4 o'clock Sunday morning. July 30th, for Liverpool, with full freight, cotton, cheese &c., and some two hundred and ifty persons.

Everything went well until about 10 o'clock en the morning of the 31st, when the cry "Man overboard!" was sounded. A boat was lowered, and efforts made to save him, but were nunvailable. He had come on board in a state of delirium tremens, and had been put in a straight-jacket by the Surgeon; thus conduned he rolled himself overboard.

The excitement caused by this event had scarcely ambsided when about one o'clock P. M. an alarm of fire sounded. All hands rushed en deck, and, as the fire was in the fore part of the vessel, all the second-clase passengers field aft, amid the wildest excitement.

Orders were given by the Captain and officers that no person should get into the boats without permission, and that the first man who attempted to force his way into a boat before all the worder was cheerfully acquiesced in by all the gentlemen in the first cabin. A vessel was soon discovered at a distance of eight milies, and the Glasgow was at once put under a full head of steam towards her, firling minnte gues and displaying signal-fage saving "I am on

As there are many persons in the Northwest who might like to invest capital is the incrative business of cotton-growing in the Senth, we ask your permission to direct their attention, through the medium of the Journal, to the advantages possessed by the rich and beantiful region known as the "Tennessee Vailey." It includes parts of the counties of Jackson, Madison, Limestone, Landerdale, Morgan, Luwrence, and Franklin. Six of these are intersected by the Memphis and Charleston railroad, and two of them border on the river whence the vailey derives its name.

Now, to the point. Many of our planters will refire to their summer recidences on the mountains, and rent, lease, or sell their lands. Some of these, which are without fence or farm hands, may be leased on good terms.

After a few maments of prompt action he eleared the house of his lewed eisters-la-law and their dissolute companiona, and told his wife that hereafter he would conduct the home as became an housest citizen. Those who had beam in the hobit of frequenting the house knew not the change, and concequently on Stataway afternoon Frank. Fisher and others went to the house, but were denied admission. Fisher lasted on going in, but was warned by Cummingham that if he did he would shoot him. It is stated that Fisher supposed C. to be a new "fancy man," and turned to his companion to borrow a revolver at him, the ball striking him in the back, passing through his body and lodging in the skin in front, indicting a mortal wound. Fisher's companions helped him lute their cavriage and conveyed him to the real-dence of Salle Miller, where, despite the character of the house, the unfortunate young man received the kindest treatment. HENRY W. NORTON. FRIDAY, AMGUST 4, 1865.

Major-General Palmer, which appears on our first page this morning, is a very important one at this time to the people of Kentucky. It is a very strong speech. The General discusses with clearness the approaching election, setting forth the part which the military will sustain to is in enforcing the laws of the State. Our readers should give it a careful perusal. Only a couple of days intervene between this and the election. Do our citizens fully realine the great importance to their interests and peace of adopting the amendment which will rid us of the disturbing element that has filled all our borders with death, and cast over them the pall of a nameless sorrow? The enhiert has been fully and freely discussed, and bearings by every thinking man in the State. We appeal to our intelligent citizens especially to take a calm and comprehensive view of the question, and exert themselves for the good of their State and country. Unfortunately, in almost every election, a considerable number of the better class of voters will not perform their duty, the duty of voting. Improper men are quently sent to the Legislature or Congress simply because many good men will not take rouble to go to the polls and vote. One vote will make little difference, says some one who has business to attend to, and thus, so far as he is concerned, the election goes by default. Somebody else makes a similar excuse, and still another and another, until the aggregate of these comebodies becomes a large number, sufficient in many cases to have turned the scale and carried the election. One vote! Why, es that shall extend over the whole coun-

rote. Let every one who is entitled to vote, and no others, in this great struggle for prog and prosperity in this State, see that his vote is cast. One vote may revolutionize an empire. One vote may redeem Kentucky. She must be redeemed. She must not be permitted to sink into the black and miry slough that awaits her if she persistently turn her eyes from the light and her feet from the straight nath of duty, interest, and patriotism that is or welfare within her own grasp. The ques. tion she is called upon to solve next Monday is e of the most momentous ever presented to copie of the whole country are fixed intently pon them. Do our citizens know in what ight the struggle here is regarded by the loval nasces of other States? It is looked upon duply as an laste in favor of peace and the terests of the city, no less than to those of the mion, of submission to the inevitable decision hand, and of opposition to that decision and in favor of reviving the old basis of slavery tion as it existed before the war on the other. That is the party that is marshaling its hosts to the conflict in order to obtain control of the Government at the next Presidential election, if it cannot succeed in breaking down or shaping the course of the present Administration. The foregoing is a frank, if not a prudent, onfession. The contemplation of such a career for republican America arouses the fears of every aristocratic statesman in England. Those fears, however, are not shared by the honest marces of that country, who rejoice in the growth of popular freedom everywhere. The people of England are not jealous of onr exanding commerce, nor of our beantiful and fertile lands, nor of the ruddy and vigorous civil ization which the irrepressible Anglo-Saxon is carrying from the center to the elrcumference of America. The The editor of the Democrat can say what he will now, but, in years past, when it suited his purposes, he insisted, as strongly as an editor uld, upon the great interest which he said the people had in electing to Congress men in favor with that body and with the President and the date for the Legislature in the Third District of this city, has issued an address to the people, which is replete with strong, practical, good sense as to the bearing of the proposed Constiof Louisville. After arguing that the adoption of the amendment is the "only solution to the negro question that will give to us peace and quictude," and that our acceptance of the moa-sure will be "an evidence of a love of country that rises above the prejudices of the hour,

The value of property in this city, on the adoption of the amendment, will increase rapidly and immediately. The municipal authorities will be aided, the State and city laws more readily enforced.

Small the foregoing considerations in favor Surely, the foregoing considerations in favor of the amendment, if it be regarded alone as a messure of policy, should induce every business man in the city to vote for it on Monday next. Mr. Armstrong, being a thorough business man bimself, looks at the question from a practical stand-point, and sees that Louisville, as a free city, will bound forward with a degree of vigor and prosperity as yet unknown in her history Her mills and furnaces and factories and vard: will acquire new life and enterprise, and her population, which is wealth itself, will increase with wonderful rapidity. Louisville is the commercial emporium of Kentucky, and the ratio in which her own prosperity shall inrease will be communicated to the va rious industrial channels throughout the State. The people of Louisville have been greatly an noved by the unsettled condition of lahor in which we are passing is necessarily attended by serious losses and frequent vexations; but ttle definitely the question before us, and our present difficulties will disappear, peace and order will be quickly restored, and, under the new condition of affairs, the relations of capital and labor will also become settled and mutually prosperous. With this view of the question, we have long felt, as we now do, that the people of this city are peculiarly interested in the their future wealth and happiness, we shall greatly lament, as they surely will, if they vote against it on Monday next. A FRANK CONFESSION.—We naturally respect | ROBERT L. MAITLAND & OO. s bold and unequivocal foe; we respect him for his manliness and candor. Throughout onr recent civil war a large proportion of the English aristocrats looked upon the Federal cause with jesiousy and hatred, and their infinence in Parlament was constantly exerted to aid, indirectly but effectually, the rebellion of our Southern tates. Only a few of them, however, pos seesed the moral courage to declare their sentiments openly and distinctly, but they secretly idas to deetroy our commerce and run the with chagrin the intelligence of Union victories the importance of which they invariably sough to disparage: but they gladly halled each rebe riumph, and held it up to the world to prove the impossibility of conquering the brave ar never felt, however, any honest sympathy with the rebel canse, else they would have urged Engwere confident that the war would terminate in the permanent dissolution of the Union, and the hope of this result inspired all their words of our great Republic, while revealing the seeret purpose of the leading English statesmen with reference to our late civil war, should give enewed animation to the pride and patriotism of every American citizen. Since the suppres sion of the rebellion and the re-establishment of our national anthority over all the secoding States, a radical change has occurred in the spirit of the English press and the speeches of English orators in regard to American affairs. The result of the war has already tanght them and they have ceased to question its stability There is more confidence now among the English people in the enduring character of our institutions than they ever felt before, and they int lately demonstrated the growth of liberal principles in their Parliamentary election. The Liberal party of England, led by such illustrious champions as John Bright and Stuart Mill (the great and good Richard Cobden, alas! is dead), gained in the recent election nine new member of Parliament, and this glorions triumph may be largely ascribed to the result of our civil war. The Tory party, of which Mr. Rosbuck is a distingulahed representative, is rapidly losing strength, and we may now safely anticipate an mprovement, if need be, in the relations of riendship between England and the United Our army and our navy, by their endurance and valor, have destroyed the rebellion upon which were based the hopes of our enenies abroad, and now, if the people North and South will be true to themselves and the nation, our vast domains will be filled at last by the Anglo-Saxon race, our commerce will visit every sea, and the Flag of the Republic, in the lar guage of Mr. Roebnck, will finally "govern

UNION MERTING TO-NIGHT AT THE CORNER OF NINTH AND BROADWAY. - General Stout, Union candidate for the Legislature, at the place above named, will address the people, and his competitor, Mr. Anderson, is respectfully invited to attend and participate in the discussion. Colonela Buckley and Barge will also address the people in favor of the Am neut. A band of music has been secured. Let the people turn out and take counsel for the

The war is over, and the greater portion cannot say that peace has fully resppeared among us. There seems to be au uncertainty, a dark uncertainty, which casts a gloom over our land, creating a painful apprehension impending danger. We say danger, for the peace of our country may be as much imperiled low as when an armed host was marshaled against the armies of the Republic. The peace and harmony of a Government like ours, based upon the popular will, and so nicely constructed as to need the support not only of the actual mejority of the voters in the Union, but of the majority of those of all the different sections and States depends in a crest measure upon the free and untrammeled privileges of the elec-

Union in the full glowy of days gone by, let the the South with their portion of the great work. I they prove recreant to the trust reposed in them, if they show a disposition to abuse the magnanimous confidence of the country, it will then be time to compel them by force, if necessary, to act in harmony with the rest of the Union. Our country can never be the great and powerful nationality it once was, so long as an armed force is required to compel one section to acquiesce in the policy adopted by another. The great bone of contention, the great cause of difference, the great question that irritated, inflamed, and prejudiced our people has been removed. The thought of slavery may still agitate the fanatics of the North, but the body of slavery is dead, buried, and mearly forgotten. Why then should we, the people of the United States, whose only wish is to see our glorious old flag unfuri its heaven, as the emblem of power, happithe heaven of rest for the oppressed the earth, desire to have a difference the lunter of the stars shining beautifully from the azure field. If the numerou planets in the constellation of our national country, why dim a portion of them by the dark shadows of bayonets? [For the Louisville Sunday Journal.] HOUSES OF REFUGE AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS. Have pity on homeless, neglected children To them life is a long, dark void, broken only by waits and sobs. No parent's love has warmed their hearts. The kind voice, the soft J. DANTELS, Late Copt., U. S. A. hand, are unknown to them. Affection has not provided them with a home. Their young hearts, frosen by neglect and vice, might be notlened by tenderness, and their feet directed in the path of daty by Lindness. Their original in the path of daty by Lindness. softened by tenderness, and their feet directed in the path of duty by kindness. Their griefs and degraded. Oh, raise poor neglected chilhear not the music of a loved one's voice, nor watch the tender love-lit eyes. The Angel of above. On the young brow is the impress of sorrow. The young face is lined with marks of care. The tear of repontance and grisf falls from the eye. How eloquently it speaks! It tells of anguish of spirit and a bleeding heart. The life-blood of that young heart is curdled. It has been accustomed to see that evil of nature HATHAWAY, LEACH & STEARNS blackness of heart which, of all others, a child should never know. Then gladden the

them in the performance of duty-stimulate them to persevere in overcoming difficulties.
Fill their bearts with a love of justice, truth, and mercy. When the sensitive nature of childd is chilled by coldness and neglect, when vant spirit is shadowed, and the outgushing affection of a warm, loving heart is eked or cast back on itself, it proves a hard, bitter lesson. Distrust follows, and its whole lonely path of young wanderers. Give them sympathy and companionship. Encourage retinue of gloomy attendants. Many persons of enlarged views and extended observation think it a fault of the present age that the remedial schemes exceed the preventive. No power is more effectual for the rising generation. The mind is as much developed as the physical being by action. We think our orphan asylums, industrial and reformatory schools have generally confined their gently, and to use the best and most approved means for accomplishing the results. The dis-

A mighty work has been commenced and carried on in the North in the rescuing of children from bad influences and placing the homes where they will be cared for and religlously trained. Institutions for the reform of luvenile criminals are very much peeded in our New York, some of the older girls are taught dress-making by a practical dress-maker, who four deliars per month and their dinners, but they must attend school in the morning. They receive, as others do, a penny for each good mark in echool. Opportunities that offer for nost girls in winter. In summer many go to the country and pick berries, put up pickles, &c. Many of the summer inmates newers. In houses of refuge at the North fo broom-making, whip-making, chair-scating school of Boston has originated the plan o requisite for mavigating vessels. The institu and conducted almost entirely by its boys y a child is saved from ruin by being provided with a pleasant reformatory home. In a the age when she most needs protection and councel, companionship and sympathy, and the possession of some regular occupation by which to carn a livelihood, she is, by rules limiting the advantages of the institution to those of specified ages, excluded from the shelter of said institution; its doors are closed upon her, and she must go forth into the cold world to fight the battle of life alone and unarmed. But in secure good homes to the inmates when they

AN ECCENTRIC TESTATOR.—The Paris world has been dying over the "will" of an odd fish who died the other day, and which his heirs man, it would seem, made the document a vo-hicle of satire almed at all his friends. To one famous among his acquaintances for possessing the most boots, pantaloons, and waistcoats in Paris he left 500f, two pairs of boots, two pairs of pantalouns, and two walstcoats; to a skeptic who was always railing at religion and priests, he left 1,000f, on condition that he went to conession once a fortnight and took the com munion annually for three years; to another he stole one franc from him ten years ago: to another, who was fond of getting how come you-so, and of singing then most boisterously. most excellent wine, twelve bottles of Raspail's mixture for hoarseness, and six bottles of ab-synthe "to clear his throat." He bequeathed ed to write him complimentary letters on his birthday and on New Year's day. Elice got 100f for her general beauty; Gabrielle was left 500f for her delightful conversation at the supper-table; Adeline received 500f for being as ructions about his funeral, "which must not be a lugubrious one." He ordered two hundred and fifty laboring men to be invited to it, and gave directions that each should receive three francs, a chicken-pie, and a bottle o If there be any sick ladies among those who tend my funeral my will is that each of them receive two bottles of my best old Bordeaux queathed to the Commissary of Police, who was charged with distributing all these objects, Bof, four bottles of champagne, and two bot-tles of sherry, upon condition that he took care to see the chicken pies were of the best quality. The heirs contected the will of their uncle (an pld wine merchant of Bercy, who was fond of good living and good wine) upon the ground nity. The court declined to take this view of the jovial will which had made them laugh, and so disarmed them.
